

Fundraising at Work

Encouraging your work colleagues to fundraise is an excellent way to help us keep our 'Homes from Home' open.

Could you elect The Sick Children's Trust as your Charity of the Year at work?

Does your place of work give charitable donations? If so, perhaps you could support an application that we send to your company?

we're here, so you can be there

“ When I heard about the fantastic work of The Sick Children’s Trust I was inspired to raise money for such a brilliant charity. It wasn’t hard to persuade my boss or my colleagues to get involved – in fact they loved every minute of it and it really brought us together as a team. ”

Denise Salter
Yorkshire Building Society, Sheffield

Fancy a day away from the office for a good cause? Perhaps you could get a group of your colleagues together to do some volunteering?

Or could you encourage your colleagues to get involved in some fundraising....by arranging a raffle, auction, dress down day, muffin morning or sponsored event at work?

Not only will you be helping The SCT by raising funds at work, but your company will benefit too! Fundraising activities can be an excellent team building opportunity, a chance for everyone at work to get to know one another socially.

We’re here to help with your fundraising whenever you need it, in any way we can. If you simply want to run ideas past us, perhaps need a little creative input or just don’t know where to start, please get in touch, we’d love to hear from you!

And from ideas...to...actual stuff! As well as being a phone call or email away at all times for advice and support, we can provide you with lots of stuff to help with your fundraising endeavours - such as sponsorship forms, posters, T-shirts, collection boxes and buckets.

We also have a dedicated PR manager who will do everything they can to help promote your company’s involvement with The Sick Children’s Trust.
